What is Service Learning?

School-based service-learning combines meaningful service to the community with classroom studies in a way that improves student learning and strengthens the community. Students work in collaboration with community members, teachers, and classmates to meet real community needs, while applying core concepts from the regular classroom curriculum. Students develop responsibility and citizenship while increasing academic achievement.

History of Service Learning?

The National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993 created a new federal agency know as the Corporation for National Service. The Corporation's purpose is to provide funds, training, and assistance to states in order to develop and expand service opportunities for young people. A portion of this national legislation created the Learn and Serve America Program for state department of educations to fund local schools that wish to implement Service-Learning.

The Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) has received federal dollars from the Corporation for National service in order to administer the Missouri Service-Learning Grants Program. Approximately $252,000 has been awarded to Missouri's public schools for the 2006-2007 school year for local service-learning programs. Currently 20 school districts across the state receive Service-Learning Grants with over 20,000 students,1,100 teachers in grades K-12 and 1,500 volunteers participating in projects.

What is the Missouri Service-Learning Fall Conference?

The Missouri Service-Learning Fall Conference is a gathering of Service-Learning Coordinators, Service-Learning participants, Community Based Organization Representatives, teachers involved in Service-Learning and others interested in Service-Learning. The conference will highlight Best Practices in the area of Service-Learning as well as give those persons who are new to Service-Learning an opportunity learn more about the methodology of Service-Learning. There is a student track led by students participating in Service-Learning and a chance to highlight Outstanding efforts by individuals in the Service-Learning arena.

Who Should Attend?

- Learn and Serve Grantees
- Service-Learning Coordinators
- Teachers participating in Service-Learning projects
- Students participating in Service-Learning projects
- Teachers interested in integrating Service-Learning into their District
